1. About Course

Branded Environment design is an evolving design direction in India that is adapting to the global brand culture. This brand culture is being propelled by emerging entrepreneurship and innovation in India. Indian brands are now becoming global brands and catering to international consumers. Designers in coming years will have to be thus well equipped to design such branded environments. Branded Environments design, as a direction, is however in its nascent stage in India. This course is thus planned as an exposure trip to a country that has a wide array of branded environments that play an important role in its economy and is supported by tourism of the country. It is planned for designers to understand the direct and indirect forces driving their design decisions. This course will be a compact but intense course, based on travel to Singapore and visiting and analyzing the wide range of Branded Environment to understand how the design is playing a crucial role in the brand's ecosystem. This will cover retail as well as hospitality segment and case studies will be taken up from the wide range of options in flagship stores, experience centers, concept stores, themed cafe etc. For more information, please visit <https://sws.cept.ac.in>
