1	The process of converting starting from tracing back programmatic condition to designing, to make it an constructable object. i think this process helps one understand the layers and once adapt , it can helps while designing withou being concious/ sub-concious about it.

5	The course is thoughtfully designed and well-structured, particularly in terms of the studio???s intent. The journey from conceptualization to working details is carried out in an engaging and coherent manner???starting with the ideation phase, where we interpret and understand the programme, and moving towards developing an architectural scheme, followed by detailed resolution. The intermediate reviews at each stage of the studio are especially helpful, providing clarity and direction on how to move forward. What truly sets this course apart is the tutor and the distinctive way in which the entire process is facilitated.
6	i liked the direct objectives and the holistic approach to designwithout leaving anything important out
7	One of the best studios in FA. teaches students about form and space and how to intervene in an existing building.
8	Nothing
9	the quantity and quality of exploration through different mediums
10	.
11	The sheer dedication tutor and peers had really drove me.

5	It's a question I often reflect on???whether the studio process should follow a strict timeline or allow for a more flexible approach, moving back and forth between stages.
6	maybe more structured outline on the approach to design, after conceptualization it began to get very messy and there wasn't enough guidance to mateiral structure abd detailsl.
7	Have a more structured timeline so that every student can detail out the project in the best way.
8	Course name- torturing operations
11	Course can be more strict and focused on working drawings as final outcome.

5	As mentioned earlier in the course feedback, it is the tutor who truly makes this studio a unique and enriching space to learn and grow. The feedback received from sir has been incredibly valuable???not just in an academic sense, but also in terms of personal, spiritual, and intellectual growth. The guidance extended beyond architectural thinking, offering insights into philosophical reflection and helping us think like practicing architects. For me, the most meaningful aspect of the course was the opportunity to learn under a faculty member who could engage in deep, focused discussions on any area we were struggling with???discussions that settle at the core of the mind and spirit. Throughout the course, the faculty consistently supported us???teaching how to approach design challenges, how to resolve conceptual thinking, and how to refine ideas towards their highest potential. These conversations often touched on deeper layers of meaning, encouraging a more holistic development???academically, professionally, and spiritually. The clarity and relevance of these conversations were exactly what a student seeks in the process of learning.
6	he really cared about the design and wanted the best of our skills and brains to be applied to it, that was really enocuraging, his entebasive knowledge, anecdotes, and ideas were so effectively communicated that I was really able to get a full grasp of things
7	Would talk about the subject beyond the course outline, which taught us alot about architecture in general.
8	Not a good tutor- I heard that he is a good tutor but no.

6	more structured discussions, even if he doesn't feel it because a lot was missed out on and could have just been improved if he sat down and worked with the student. felt like his interest was gone and that sort of jeopardized the students
7	Nothing, a bit biased at the beginning but is fair to everyone
8	Mind your words, though we don't mind it but you definitely need to think before you say. You can't be like this!!
9	maybe they should stop allowing the students to grade themselves under the impression that they will grade "honestly" or "appropriately", and instead follow a grading rubric that ensures fair grades for everyone
11	Nothing.

4	The studio environment was not particularly conducive to development, as the overall atmosphere often felt discouraging. Over time, it appeared that the tutor's level of engagement diminished, both in terms of teaching and general presence. Toward the end of the term, he frequently mentioned that he would be available for discussions in the evenings, but unfortunately, these meetings did not consistently take place???often when we needed guidance the most. At times when we were especially confused, his feedback seemed to introduce further ambiguity rather than providing clarity.
5	I would like to express my deepest gratitude to the faculty, Smit Vyas for being such a remarkable mentor and guide throughout this journey. Your unwavering support, thoughtful critiques, and the time you devoted to each of us did not go unnoticed. You created a space where we felt safe to question, explore, and grow???not only as students of architecture but as individuals trying to find meaning in our work and ourselves. Thank you for nurturing our thinking, challenging us to do better, and showing us how design can be both a disciplined practice and a deeply spiritual pursuit. This experience will remain a foundational part of my learning journey, and I am truly grateful for it.
6	Great tutor,
7	Do you really think that being rude and bad is being modern!?
8	my experience working with this faculty was not great as throughout the semester there was a certain bias towards a few students while the rest were left to themselves. this bias was in terms of how many discussions they got, the kind of feedback they received from the faculty as well as in the grades. when brought to notice the faculty proceeded to hold grudges, continuously bringing up it up sarcastically in conversations and taunting throughout the semester, which was honestly really unprofessional.
